Mrs. Cote Trails Jurors—Flanked by guards, Mrs. Bertha Cote follows the jury from her Brockton home after making her first visit there since her arrest for the murder of her husband, Rene. The youthful widow returned to court today to hear the first government witnesses. She has completely recovered her composure which left her shortly after she had visited her apartment.

Curley Condition Steadily Worse

Mayor Curley's condition became even more critical today after a restless night during which an extra nurse was assigned to his bedside and automobile traffic passing the hospital in two streets was ordered slowed down to insure as much quiet as possible.

Dr. Edward Schott, his physician, issued a bulletin describing the mayor as being in "tough shape," but said there had been no request yet for an affidavit as to his physical condition.

The physician said, nevertheless, he was prepared to sign it at any time during the day if federal authorities ask one in connection with the advisability of removing Curley to Washington for commitment to his mail fraud sentence of six to 18 months.

The 72-year-old mayor was visited again today by his son, Francis, a Jesuit scholastic at Weston College, who came out to say he was going for Mrs. Curley and would bring her back to Cohasset hospital.

"He looks extremely tired," Francis said. "His restlessness appears to increase. There has not been an ounce of improvement. I must return to Weston tonight, for there are regulations, but I will be on call 24 hours a day if I am needed."

Proof that Boston's 72-year-old chief executive was unable to leave the hospital would result in a stay of execution of the sentence, it was predicted in Washington. Affidavits from the physicians attending the mayor would be submitted in substantiation.

"He is again complaining of pains in the head and his blood pressure has gone up," Dr. Schott reported. "He is greatly alarmed now over his physical condition."

The possibility that the court might assign a doctor or doctors to examine the mayor before ordering him to jail or granting a stay of execution, was foreseen by his attorneys, who said they were certain such an examination would confirm their report that he cannot be moved without endangering his life.

Members of his family remained today within easy reach of the hospital, ready to hasten to his bedside should he take a sudden turn for the worse.

They appeared somewhat reassured when John Kelly of the Department of Justice at Washington was reported to have stated the government would not rush execution of the prison sentence if it might jeopardize Curley's life. Kelly is one of the two federal officials who prosecuted the case against Curley.

Mrs. Curley, the mayor's daughter, Mary, and son, Francis, visited him at the hospital last night. The latter, on leaving, said his father was in "very, very bad shape."

It was disclosed also that Mrs. Curley herself was near collapse from strain and worry and had been given sedatives by the mayor's physician. When she left the hospital she said she had found the mayor very restless and showing little interest in anything. He did not even show interest in the bundle of letters written by civic, religious and business leaders, containing expressions of sympathy, she said.

Rev. Thomas F. Devlin of St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset, administered the sacrament of extreme unction to the mayor.

Boston New Phone Building Gets OK

The New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. received authorization today from the office of the Housing Expediter in Washington to go ahead with construction of its 18-story building in Franklin st., for which the excavation has been completed.

The building itself is estimated to cost $2,746,400, but it is expected to represent a $10,000,000 outlay when all equipment is installed. It will be used as a long distance telephone center.

Washington officials describe it as the largest of 31 nonhousing structures recently given approval.

Truman Flays State Auto Laws

WASHINGTON, June 18 (INS) — President Truman declared today that automobile driver license laws in many states are "nothing more than revenue measures and their administration a travesty on public safety."

The Chief Executive told the Highway Safety Conference that the "appalling destruction of life and property through highway accidents amounts to a national disaster."

He charged many states had made little or no progress in raising standards of motor vehicle administration and called for uniformity of state driver license laws.

House Primed to Override Predicted Labor Bill Veto

WASHINGTON, June 18 (AP) — Top Democratic and Republican leaders agreed today that the House passage of the labor bill over a Presidential veto is "in the bag." The Senate may tag along, but the outcome there is less certain. House leaders definitely expect a veto even though President Truman told reporters at Princeton, N. J., yesterday "I haven't made up my mind yet."

Rail Embargo To Halve Hub Port Traffic

Rail embargo on export freight destined for the Port of Boston will cost the port a 50 per cent cut in its overall export business it was estimated today by Southworth Lancaster, traffic manager of the Port of Boston Authority. The embargo, which affects only American flag vessels, including deep water and coastwise vessels of both CIO and A. F. of L. affiliation, went into effect at midnight. Lancaster said the port would also suffer an additional 50 per cent loss in import cargo because of the National Maritime Union tieup, which the union heads claim has already frozen more than 700 ships in East Coast and Gulf ports.

While only five ships were directly affected in Boston, with only one vessel actually unable to sail, a new threat loomed today with the reopening of contract negotiations between the operators of 32 colliers and local officials to the NMU.

Collier owners were forewarned that the same sit-in tactics now being employed on general cargo vessels might be used against the coal carriers if there was evidence of any delaying action on the part of the operators.

The collier contract ran out June 15, but was extended until June 22, the date when the NMU strike vote will be completed. Two colliers are discharging cargo and two more arrived this morning from Norfolk.

He said he will send a message to Congress Friday.

A veto would make labor union control the next big issue between the White House and Congress, with more potential fights in sight.

But the "co-operation" about which the Chief Executive and congressional Republicans talked when the session began last January apparently has just about exploded anyway.

GOP Leader Halleck of Indiana gave the tipoff on that after the House upheld, by a two-vote margin yesterday, Mr. Truman's veto of the tax cut bill. Halleck told newsmen the veto was "the exact opposite of co-operation."

Other Republican chiefs who do not want their names used say the same thing. The way they talk makes it appear bare-knuckled battling is likely from now on, particularly on domestic problems that will supply electioneering material for the 1948 campaign.

If the Chief Executive does veto the labor bill, he will have to count on his former colleagues in the Senate to back him up.

As for the House and the labor bill, Halleck said:

"There is no doubt whatever that we can override the veto. That's in the bag."

Democratic Leader Rayburn of Texas said he figures the House will vote at least three to one to override.

The House passed the compromise labor bill, putting various curbs on strikes and unions, 320 to 79. That is a 4-1 majority.

The Senate passed it, 54 to 17, by better than a 3-1 tally. The House voted Monday to keep support prices for wool at their present levels and to direct Mr. Truman to protect domestic prices. A veto is widely expected because of the Administration's policy of lowering barriers to world trade.

Mrs. Cote's Jealousy of Dancer Motive, State Says

By STEVE O'LEARY and JAMES J. DELANEY

PLYMOUTH, June 18—Indicating that jealousy over her husband Rene's friendship for dancer Barbara Belmore was her motive, Asst. Dist. Atty. John A. Wheatley told a Superior Court jury today that the State would show Mrs. Bertha S. Cote, 28, bludgeoned him to death in their Brockton apartment last Dec. 28. Wheatley, opening for the State, also asserted the prosecution would prove no one entered or left the Cote home from 1:30 to 4:30 a. m., on the morning of the murder.

As the prosecutor outlined his case, the diminutive defendant sat in a chair beside the prisoner's dock taking rapid notes of the vital points he stressed in his address to the jurors.

Wheatley asserted that from the time Mrs. Cote first was questioned she "showed consciousness of guilt."

He related how the state planned to show that the slain man had become acquainted last summer with Miss Belmore and that there were frequent differences between husband and wife.

He told of two telegrams received by Cote from the dancer around Thanksgiving and Christmas and declared the State contended that the defendant was aware of their contents.

As a result of a telegram received Christmas Eve, Wheatley said, Cote left his home and did not return until early the next morning and that he repeated this for the next two nights.

He said the State would show that on the eve of the slaying Cote borrowed his employer's auto and failed to return for some time and that the defendant urged the employer to have police pick up the car.

He told how Mrs. Cote arranged for a woman to mind the baby daughter while she went out and played cards, returning a few minutes after her husband reached home.

He said the State would produce testimony of neighbors that noises were heard in the third floor apartment of the Cotes. The noise was climaxed by a crash at

A total of 107 taxmen were called, with the defense using a total of 13 challenges and the government six.

about 1:30 a. m., he said.

"From that moment until 4:32 a. m.," he said, "The State will show that no one entered or left the Cote apartment."

He told the jurors that the state would show that the defendant, under questioning, had told police that she heard someone coming up the back stairs to the apartment early that morning and that she identified this person as Walter Steele.

He said that she told questioners that she heard an argument and conversation about money and that Steele said that he would "forget it this time." Then, she told questioners, she heard a scuffle and a crash and then saw Steele running from the room.

"As a result of her story," Wheatley said, "a complaint charging murder was issued against Steele."

"Some time thereafter," he continued, "police questioned her as a result of her accusations and that she told them her story was preposterous."

"She told these officers, some time I'll give you the whole story. When I tell you the whole story, what is going to happen to me—

NO SATURDAY TRIAL SESSIONS

PLYMOUTH, June 18—There will be no Saturday sessions of Superior Court here during the Cote murder trial.

This was indicated today at the start of court when Judge Felix Forte read the law, amended by the legislature June 1, this year, which closes superior courts on Saturdays.

"There will be no announcement regarding Saturday sessions unless it comes directly from the chief justice of the superior court," Judge Forte said.

Unmindful of this recent ruling of the legislature, court officials here earlier had stated that court would sit this Saturday.

Prosecutor Tells What Cote Neighbors Heard Murder Night

PLYMOUTH, June 18—The third day of the Cote murder trial opened this forenoon shortly after 10. After the formal opening and the poll of the jury, opposing counsel went into conference at the bench with Judge Forte.

Following the conference, Judge Forte read law amended by the Legislature, June 1, 1947, which prevents superior courts holding sessions on Saturdays.

The judge said, "There will be no announcement regarding Saturday sessions, unless it comes directly from the chief justice of the Superior Court."

Asst. Dist. Atty. Wheatley then opened the Commonwealth's case. "You men have been chosen to sit on this jury—a serious case and arduous duty. You have heard the indictment as read by the clerk. It is a most serious charge."

"Forget about the indictment that you have heard and accept the evidence that will be presented by the Commonwealth in this case."

"Whatever verdict that may be reached will be as near perfect justice as we can have."

"It is my duty now to reconstruct to you gentlemen what happened on the morning of Dec. 28. We present this evidence in our court based on questions and answers made during this investigation.

"You will hear from this witness stand, testimony from a witness to be called that was involved in the picture. From him you will hear a good deal of evidence in this case."

"You are going to have all the evidence which we have."

"The defendant in this case and her husband, Rene, hired from the owner the third floor apartment in the house in 72 Harvard st., which you saw yesterday, about a year ago—sometime in May, 1946."

"A short time later they moved into the apartment with their four-year-old daughter. They lived there a short time, then separated and a divorce libel was filed by the defendant."

"After being separated for some weeks, they came back to live together until some time in the end of September. We will show one or two episodes of differences between the two of them."

"About Thanksgiving, the defendant intercepted a telegram from a person her husband, Rene, became acquainted with during the summer of 1946 while he was on vacation in New Hampshire. This person was a professional dancer and he was in her company in the fall when he met her in Quebec and drove her to Rutland where they stayed with friends."

"A day or two before Christmas, there was another telegram which the defendant knew about. Whether or not she knew the contents we leave for you to decide. The State contends that she did. The substance of it was that the dancer, Miss Belmore, would be home for the holidays and would see him."

"Cote received the telegram and on Christmas Eve met her in Boston and drove her home. He arrived at his own home early Christmas morning. Early Christmas afternoon he left his home and arrived back at 4 or 5 the next morning. It was the same thing the next day."

"On Friday, Dec. 27, about 2 p. m., Cote said to his employer, 'Earl, may I borrow your car for about an hour.' He was given permission, got in and drove off."

"About 6 or 7 that night, Earl called the defendant at her home and there was some conversation. She said her husband was not home. Earl asked her what was

4 Often Censored Chandler on Air, Ex-Nazi Testifies

The government pressed toward conclusion today its case against Douglas Chandler, 58, expatriate American ex-newspaperman accused of treason by propaganda broadcasts to

U. S. from Berlin during the war. In federal court, where Judge Francis J. W. Ford repeatedly strove to untangle wrangling counsel, Hans von Richter, onetime assistant to the Nazi chief of radio programs beamed to the U. S., testified he had censored many of Chandler's broadcasts.

Von Richter identified himself as a member of the German consulate in Cleveland, O., from 1935 to 1940. He said he had been ejected from the Nazi party in 1935 and was recalled to Germany in 1942 after serving with the Brazilian consul for two years.

In Berlin he became assistant to Karl L. Schotte, head of the shortwave zone directed to America. In that capacity he conferred frequently with Chandler, he said.

Von Richter corroborated testimony given yesterday by Mrs. Margaret Sittler, London-born wife of an Ohio-born Nazi, that Chandler had discussed plans for a broadcast with Von Richter by phone.

Gerd T. Wagner, who came to America in 1924, became a naturalized citizen in Massachusetts in 1934 and then returned to the Reich in 1940 to become a German citizen again, identified himself as news editor of the Nazi shortwave radio station.

Wagner, who said he had installed the mosaic windows in the Christian Science Church while living in this state, said he also conferred with Chandler frequently. He was present, he said, when Chandler participated in a political discussion in which a German war victory was hailed as the redemption of the Western world.

Defense counsel said they would base their case on the contention Chandler, self-styled "Paul Revere," was insane when he beamed jibes from Germany and still is unbalanced. Four psychiatrists who examined Chandler while he was awaiting trial will be called to testify in his defense.

Senate Rushes Rent Control Bill

By WILLIAM THEIS

WASHINGTON, June 18 (INS)—The GOP Congress set up its controversial rent control bill for transmission to the White House today as the next step in keeping a program calling for adjournment on July 26.

Senate leaders gave the 15 per cent "voluntary" rent hike legislation priority for the day after agreeing with the House to end the first session of the 80th Congress in another 39 days.

Approval of the rent control extension measure, passed finally by the House Tuesday, will remove another "must" from the jammed congressional agenda.

Despite President Truman's victory in having his tax bill veto sustained and the best of Democratic opposition to the voluntary rent increase provision, there was no apparent fear of a veto on the rent control bill.

Most Rev. Karl J. Alter, bishop of Toledo, was honored on the 16th anniversary of his consecration. Nearly 1000 nuns presented him with spiritual bouquets from their religious communities. Clergymen held a dinner in his honor in the evening.

Reds Seize U. S. Club Manager

BUDAPEST, June 18 (AP)—American informants said today that political police had arrested the Hungarian manager of the Allied Officers Park Club here, which has a membership composed chiefly of Americans and Britons, on charges of being a "pro-Nazi."

The manager, Imre Fold, also was accused of being involved in a recent plot to overthrow the Hungarian republic — charges similar to those which the Communists recently used to force the resignation of Premier Ferenc Nagy.

The arrest was the first open seizure of a person employed by the Americans or British, although such action was threatened last August when a Hungarian employee of the American Officers Club was questioned by Peter Gabor, Communist chief of the Hungarian political police.

Catholic Congress At Ottawa

OTTAWA, June 18 (INS)—The Marian Congress opens in Ottawa today with all the pomp and ceremony of the Catholic Church.

The five-day festival was expected to attract 200,000 worshippers to the Canadian capital. The papal legate, Cardinal McGuigan of Toronto, will officially open the congress at 2:30 p. m. with an address in Ottawa's Basilica.

Purpose of the congress is to intercede for permanent world peace through public prayer and religious ceremonies. Homage to Mary, the Mother of God, is offered through the Marian Congress. In this respect the congress is different from the Eucharistic congresses in which Jesus is adored.

Thousands of pilgrims were arriving in Ottawa by special trains, buses and planes.

The Congress has been designed as a great religious spectacle. Solemn masses will be conducted in all of Ottawa's Catholic churches. At midnight Saturday, a pontifical mass will be celebrated at a specially constructed "Repository in Lansdowne Park. An altar 515 feet long, 80 feet wide and 155 feet high has been constructed. Accommodations to seat at least 75,000 persons have been installed.

Prelates from seven countries will take part in the programs.

Cardinals in addition to Cardinal McGuigan of Toronto who will attend the congress include Cardinals Spellman of New York; Stritch of Chicago; Mooney of Detroit; Tissierant of Rome; Gerlier of France; Artega Y Betancourt of Cuba; Pasconcellos of Brazil; Fringes of Cologne, Germany; and Mindazenty of Hungary.

In a letter to Cardinal McGuigan Pope Pius XII urged delegates to the congress to oppose those who trample on peace.

A more personal message from His Holiness was brought by Bishop Isidro Aviado of Leon, Nicaragua, who was received by the Pope on his recent tour of Europe. Bishop Aviado said the Pope felt a great deal of good would result from the congress because of the large number of countries represented and the resultant exchange of ideas.

lineup today. He wasn't flustered. He said they seemed to have their stories about right.

It began Monday night. The youth entered the Washington st., Roxbury cigar store of Charles Shapiro of Westmore rd., Mattapan, stuck the big automatic into Shapiro's flesh, took $42 from the cash register, then backed away and said, "Now, I'm going to let you have it." Shapiro was pleading for his life when the holdup man suddenly turned and ran.

Last night he entered the cab of Joseph Mirabella, Eaton st., West End, told him to drive to Roxbury and there pressed the gun against Mirabella's head, saying, "I'll blow it off if you don't kick in." He took $18.

Several hours later, Patrolman Henry Wachter of the Dudley st. station went to the youth's home to arrest him. The young bandit whipped out the gun, aimed at Wachter's stomach and pulled the trigger.

There was an empty snap and Wachter overpowered him.

She said she was awakened by a man who seized her and started to rip off her night clothes. Her screams frightened him and he fled.

Army's Sale Of VD Advice Assailed

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP)—A demand that the War Department immediately destroy millions of match books bearing prophylactic advice against venereal disease, originally designed for the armed forces, instead of distributing them through retail channels, has been sent to War Secretary Patterson by the Catholic War Veterans, Inc.

The match books are in several designs, one showing a green light, the Army sign for a prophylaxis center, and another depicting a girl with the words "easy to pick up." Sixty thousand match books went into retail channels recently, half of them to New York.

The protest, through National Commander Max H. Sorenson, denounced the covers as "crude," "vulgar" and in "shabby taste."

The telegram to Patterson demanded an investigation of government agencies "suddenly advocating promiscuity" through the covers and deplored "so-called advertising flaunting the moral law of God."

"We particularly protest against the wisecrack copy employed to promote the use of unnatural devices and promiscuity," Sorenson's telegram added.

$480,000 QUESTION

PHILADELPHIA, June 18 (AP)—About three tons of what seamen said might be "gold or grief" was brought in by a freighter for analysis which will decide whether it brings its finders a small fortune or a disposal headache.

The added cargo, stowed in oil drums on the deck of the American freighter Eastern Guide, was believed to be ambergris, an odoriferous secretion of whales valued at $5 an ounce for use in the manufacture of perfume.

If it is ambergris, the cargo is expected to be worth about $480,000.

2 Nabbed in Break At Gas Station

Two youths, 17 and 19, one a Concord Reformatory parolee, were captured in a South Boston gas station at gunpoint today after they refused to throw up their hands and come out.

Sgt. William Creedon spotted a flashing light in the Fisher gas station, D and Dorchester ave., while passing in a cruiser with Patrolmen James McMahon and James O'Brien.

While the patrolmen guarded the front door, Sgt. Creedon slipped through the window, flashed on the station lights and tracked down the hiding pair. Neither put up a struggle. Police said that a cash register had been broken open.

The victim, Charles R. Sullivan of Newtowne ct., was thrown through the windshield. His body was found 10 feet beyond the tree that finally halted the machine's wild careening.

The three other victims were trapped inside the machine and were freed only after firemen had worked with sledges and crowbars for a half hour.

They are Leo Murphy, 22, of Dimmick st., Somerville, who police said was driver of the machine; Miss Claire Shine, 18, of Maple ave., Cambridge; and Walter Mahoney, 20, of Columbia st., Cambridge.

The three were taken to Cambridge Mt. Auburn Hospital where Mahoney, the most seriously injured, was found to have suffered a crushed chest and internal injuries. His name was placed on the danger list, as was that of Murphy, who suffered head injuries. Miss Shine was treated for cuts and released.

The latter told police that her friends apparently had failed to notice the bad curve. She said she heard one of them finally yell "duck," and then lost consciousness until firemen began hacking away at the buckled doors of the wrecked machine and dragged her to safety.

Dr. Goldthwait called firemen and police who strove with an inhalator to save the victim.

Treasury Asks Split Tax for Whole Nation

WASHINGTON, June 18 (INS)—The Treasury submitted to Congress today a proposal to allow 4,900,000 married couples to split their incomes for tax purposes and thereby save an estimated $74,000,000 in income taxes annually.

This was one of four alternative plans for solving the family income tax tangle and removing discrimination transmitted by Treasury Secretary Snyder to Chairman Knutson (R.) of Minnesota, of the House ways and means committee.

The alternative plans made public one day after the House had sustained the President's veto of the tax reduction bill are to be used by the House committee in preparing overall tax revision legislation to be offered at the next session of Congress.

The House tax-writing group now is holding hearings to receive tax revision proposals and intends to draft the omnibus bill next winter.

The President, in his veto message on the Republican-sponsored tax reduction bill, said: "Now is the time to plan" for a general revision of the tax structure.

The income splitting proposal would give to married couples in the 38 non-community states tax reduction privileges similar to those now prevailing in the 10 so-called Community Property States.

Veterans Ired by Congress' Failure to Pass Helpful Bills

By KENNETH L. DIXON

WASHINGTON, June 18 (INS)—When you start kicking around the records on Capitol Hill to see which activities of the 18th Congress may make the most potential political medicine in 1948, one of the biggest mysteries which confronts you is the question of what has happened to all the veterans' legislation.

And before long you begin to see why some of the vets are pretty sore about the subject.

When the new Congress first convened, things looked pretty bright for the boys just out of uniform. Legislators had polled thousands of votes by emphasis on ex-servicemen's problems, and everybody and his dog had some sort of veterans' bill to sponsor.

Such measures poured into the legislative hopper. More than 200 bills which directly concerned the veteran or his family were introduced in the House alone.

But what has happened to all those bills?

During the five months it has been doing business, the new Congress has taken definite action on less than half a dozen such pieces of legislation.

And, according to an unofficial but fairly complete check, only three of the bills have become laws. Two of them concern veteran life insurance and the third has to do with land grant easements.

All three were comparatively routine measures, unopposed by any powerful lobbying interests and involving little or no political controversy.

A few other veterans' bills—relating to job-training and educational allowances, and benefits for the worst-wounded boys—have reached the House rules committee where they currently are being kicked around. Several others have been given hearings before the House veteran's committee.

But the majority still gather dust on the shelves of the various veterans' subcommittees to which they were referred months ago.

Berle Says Reds Forcing New War

CLEVELAND, June 18 (AP)—Adolph Berle, former assistant secretary of state, said Russian aggression was driving the world to the brink of another war. He told the AFL-International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union that the nation was "looking down the gun barrels of another war. The politicians don't say so in public, but they know it, and so do you and everybody else," Berle asserted.

He accused Soviet diplomats of using Hitler techniques and said Russian quislings could be found in Hungary, Austria, Italy, Greece and other countries.

140 Excused At Overell Trial

SANTA ANA, Cal., June 18—Nine prospective jurors—one woman and eight men—were excused from jury duty in the Overell yacht-blast trial here. They were dropped because of scruples against the death penalty.

All together, more than 140 prospective jurors moved in and out of the jury box.

Santa Ana has had its quota of crimes and violence in recent years, but the record shows that only one individual in 10 years has been given the death penalty.

U. S. Nears Windup in Chandler Trial

The government called up its final witnesses today in the treason trial of Douglas Chandler, former Nazi commentator and Hitler's radio "Paul Revere."

Defense attorneys then will take over with four psychiatrists who examined the defendant while he was at Charles St. Jail. The defense has already announced it will base its case on the contention that the commentator was insane when he beamed fibes from Germany, and that he still is insane.

He is not expected to take the stand in his own defense.

As the prosecution began to wind up its case, more transcriptions were played of Chandler's broadcasts from Germany, but even these failed to enliven the trial.

Two of Chandler's former Nazi associates even walked out of the courtroom while a record boomed out alleged Chandler insults against a new target, "Winston Churchill Churchhill."

They were Dr. Anton Winklemperer and Leo A. Ritski. Both shrugged their shoulders and walked from the courtroom. Meanwhile, the record droned on with Chandler's voice telling of the beauties of German youth.

Behavior of Chandler while in Germany was repeatedly admitted in testimony by Judge Francis J. W. Ford on the anticipated defense contention that the defendant was insane.

Chandler, according to testimony, believed that most of his troubles were due to "Jewish influence" and that the war was the brain child of a "secret Jewish world organization."

The plane, inaugurating Pan American's round-the-world commercial service, arrived here at 11:20 a. m. for a 12-hour stop, during which the editors were scheduled to meet Prime Minister Attlee, other government officials and Lord Beaverbrook, Canadian-born publisher of the London Daily Express and Evening Standard.

Home Garden Forum

By FOSTER H. WEISS

Head of the Vegetable Gardening Dept., Norfolk County Agricultural School

Q—How far apart should butternut squash be planted?

A—As this is a vine crop it should have at least six to eight feet of space between rows and the same distance between hills.

Q—How can I make peony blooms last longer after they are cut?

A—Split the stems three or four inches from the end. This seems to make the blooms last longer.

Q—Can weed killers be used to kill chick weed in an asparagus bed?

A—Some gardeners have used 2,4-D weed killer, sprayed between the rows of asparagus, with fair results.

Q—How late can corn be planted?

A—Sweet corn can be planted until about July 1.

Q—Is it necessary to pick the blossoms from new strawberry plants?

A—This is considered a good practice. If fruit is allowed to develop the first season, the plant will not send out strong runners.

Q—What are the chances of us having another attack of late blight on tomatoes this year?

A—Reports from southern growing areas show they are again having trouble with late blight, which may move up as the season advances. This depends to some extent on weather conditions. To be safe, it will be well to spray or dust weekly with half strength bordeaux or fixed copper dust. Control flea beetles to control early blight.

GOP Chief Condemns Defeat of Tax Bill

SPOKANE, Wash., June 18 (AP)—B. Carroll Reece, Republican national chairman, said the death of the tax reduction bill would mean that "the now discredited New Deal spending philosophy will be even more emphatically repudiated in 1948."

The national chairman said the people are entitled to relief from the "back-breaking, war-peak taxes," adding that the bill would have actually increased tax revenues through stimulation of commerce and industry and thus helped retire the national debt.

What About MEAT PRICES?

Stop & Shop reports to the housewives of Massachusetts

You housewives have the double job of feeding your family and watching the budget. Meat prices are an important factor in both. Here is the way we, your food purchasing agents, see the present high meat price situation:

The wholesale price of meat has risen sharply in the past two weeks. There are many reasons but, unfortunately, we have control over none of them.

During this period of rising prices, we at Stop & Shop have absorbed part of the wholesale increase. Nevertheless, we have been forced to raise our meat prices somewhat. We don't like it but we have no choice.

You, the public, are already resisting these new meat prices. You are buying less meat.

We don't blame you. Not only that, but we suggest that there are other foods which you can temporarily substitute for your favorite cuts of meat. Pot roasts, stew meats and hamburger still bring you full food value at comparatively low cost. Poultry and fish are good values at this time. Eggs, cheese and cereals can help furnish much of the protein needed for your family's continued health. There is a wide variety of canned meats and prepared foods available at reasonable prices to form the basis of many balanced meals. During these warm days especially, your family will welcome increased servings of all kinds of fresh fruits and vegetables.

During the war, you housewives learned new skills and acquired much ingenuity in meal planning; and you can do it again until meat prices once more come within reach of your family budget.

As far as we are concerned we pledge to keep these prices as low as our low-cost supermarket method of distribution will permit. Our meat departments are adequately stocked. Our meat personnel is ready to serve you.

Like most housewives, we too believe that "meat makes the meal." That's why we are meat merchants. But in a situation like this our first duty, as always, is to the public.

R. I. Resumes Cop-Gang Trial

PROVIDENCE, June 18—Trial of two former Providence patrolmen and the accused ringleader of an underworld gang, on charges of plotting a series of safe breaks last winter, continued today in Superior Court.

The defendants are George B. Harris, 33, and Gordon L. Conway, 30, ex-policemen, and Henry Cipriano, 33, charged by police with being the head of the alleged crime syndicate.

They are being tried now for a market break last February and not for the Howard Johnson restaurant break March 9 in which three gangsters were trapped and slain by detectives.

ONE TOO MANY

OMEGA, Ga., June 18 (AP)—It was a hard day on houses and Frank Powell's old truck, Hal Luck Hannah.

Old Hannah started the day off by backing into a house here. A little later in the morning she blew a tire near the Tift Turner County line and ran slapdash into another house.

The climax came after night fall when the old truck was laboring valiantly for home and the garage, only to be hit from behind by another vehicle and pushed into the side of another house.

Cote Trial

will I go to State Prison or the reformatory."

Mrs. Cote arrived at the side entrance of the courthouse at 9:50 a. m., about 10 minutes after the jurors, escorted by two court officers entered the front door and went to their room.

Once again the attractive defendant was garbed in the black and white ensemble that she has worn during the past two days of the trial. As a concession to a slight chill in the air, she also wore a tan three-quarter length collarless coat with a studded belt.

As she stepped from the car, a trace of a smile flickered across her face, the first time she has shown anything but impassive calm in her daily entrance to the courthouse.

She walked upstairs, accompanied by Mrs. Abbie Woodward, the matron, and the small group of onlookers, less than a score in comparison to the throngs of the past two days outside the courthouse, quickly dispersed.

The petite defendant today turned over to her attorneys copious notes she made yesterday on the 24-mile ride back to Plymouth jail after going with the jury to the scene of the murder—her former home in Harvard st., Brockton.

The Brockton visit apparently refreshed her memory of the events on the early morning of last Dec. 23, when her marriage ended in the violent death of her husband, Rene. Although affected by the return to her former home, she quickly recovered her composure and jail officials said she appeared happy and confident on her return to the lockup.

The prosecution spreading the table cover on which it soon will slap down its aces—testimony by Mrs. Cote's former neighbors and testimony by the police about Mrs. Cote's statements to them after the murder was revealed.

The jury's view of the death scene and its environment proved a holiday event for some 150 adults and children. They stared at the sheriff's deputies' gilt-ornamented distaffs. They stared at the jurors. They stared at Judge Felix Forte, the plainclothes detectives, the prosecutors and defense counsel, the scribbling men and women newspaper reporters. They grimaced at the photographers.

They folded their arms and coolly surveyed Mrs. Cote. And nobody gave her a sign of recognition in the neighborhood where she had lived.

Mrs. Cote stood or walked beside the jail matron, Mrs. Abbie L. Woodward, in calmness and considerable dignity. If she heard remarks, she gave no sign.

"I don't think she did it," said one girl.

"If she didn't, who did?" said a young man.

Up the driveway to the rear door near the rhododendrons, the procession moved, Mrs. Cote following the jury. Up the narrow stairs to the finished attic, now occupied by another family.

As they entered the kitchen, Atty. Townes called the jury's attention to the fact that the door partially obscured a rear window when opened. He pointed to the stove, the sink, the door to the bathroom. Their significance remains to be disclosed.

Wheatley took them to the living room where the Christmas tree had stood and where Cote, who slept on a couch, was murdered.

He showed the jurors the bedroom of little Barbara Ann Cote and the other bedroom in which the child's accused mother slept. Townes called special attention to the windows. Again their significance was left to later disclosure.

The odd assortment of visitors went into each room. In the nursery they found a crib. The present occupants—visiting with neighbors during the jury's view—have a baby.

Mrs. Cote for a moment looked as if she might cry, but that was all. Her lashes showed a trace of moisture. That was all. She gave no other indication of emotion, not even in the living room.

The jury and Mrs. Cote also visited the second-floor apartment where Mrs. Margaret Minnock at 3:30 a. m. on Dec. 23 heard sounds as if of quarreling from the Cote apartment.

Outside the house again, the jury's attention was called to the driveway and the lawns of the Cote home at 72 Harvard st. and of the house next door at 68 Harvard st. In that driveway and on those lawns—then covered with new snow—a man's footprints were found leading to and from

Martin, Nimitz Cote Trial Eulogize John Paul Jones

Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Speaker of the House of Representatives, and Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, paid homage today to naval hero John Paul Jones on the occasion of the 200th anniversary of his birth July 6.

"The versatile genius of John Paul Jones," said Speaker Martin, "cannot fail to inspire every American. His spectacular rise from the humble master's apprentice to the command of indomitable frigates, his transition from peasant boy to European diplomat are features of his colorful career that excite man's wonder and their allegiance in every land."

Said Admiral Nimitz: "We recall with pride his notable victory when he led the crew of the Bonhomme Richard to the deck of the Serapis, forced the enemy surrender and at a distance of a mile on the captured vessel saw his own ship sink with the colors still flying.

"Men of the Navy can find no better pattern of professional excellence, boundless energy and inspired courage than that which distinguished the life of John Paul Jones, a founder of naval tradition."

the Cote house on the morning of Dec. 28.
The footprints were not mentioned to the jury. That will come later.

Atty. Townes insisted on having the jury taken to the house at 64 Harvard st., two doors from the Cote home. He called attention to both those nearby houses "to the east" between the Cote home and Warren ave. He called attention to the windows of the house next door. He called attention to the "elevation of the lawns." He called attention to the "nearness" of the houses in that row, and to their similarity.

SHALL WE CUT OUR TAXES?

TWO IMPORTANT and highly significant events argue powerfully and convincingly for favorable consideration of the pending Community Property Bill by the Massachusetts Legislature.

One is President Truman's ill-advised veto of the Federal tax reduction program.

The other is Pennsylvania's decision to become a Community Property State—the eleventh in the Union.

The fact that Congress has been unable to override the Presidential veto means that there will be NO UNITED STATES TAX CUT for Massachusetts people this year.

The simultaneous fact that Pennsylvania will reduce her United States taxes at least fifty million dollars, if the Governor signs the Community Property measure which the Legislature has approved, means that the Massachusetts wage earner will be obliged to contribute substantially MORE to Uncle Sam than the Pennsylvanian with the same income contributes.

To prevent this unfair situation from becoming permanent it is urgently essential that our Massachusetts Senators and Representatives accept the recommendation of the Joint Committee on Legal Affairs for a recess study of the Community Property Bill sponsored by Rep. Peter J. Jordan of Revere and Rep. David M. Cleary of Charlestown.

Failure to authorize this study would be tantamount to raising Federal income taxes as much as one hundred million dollars a year in this State.

The Committee has requested an appropriation of $50,000 for its investigation of the Community Property plan.

The request should be granted.

An investment of $50,000 to save the people $100,000,000 is so obviously worthwhile and necessary that no person with the right kind of concern for the future of Massachusetts and the welfare of the people can seriously object to it.

There will be much satisfaction for Messrs. Jordan and Cleary in learning that the law which the Pennsylvania Legislature passed is almost identical with the one they filed for Massachusetts and which former Superior Court Justice John J. Burns, testifying at the State House hearing, called "the once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to slash Federal taxes and keep Massachusetts money in Massachusetts."

WORLD MENACE

THE ANNUAL convention of Rotary International in San Francisco, including the delegations of more than 70 nations and thus being concerned with a program primarily at the international level, was repeatedly and urgently reminded that Communistic aggression with which so many nations are already dealing individually is in fact a WORLD PROBLEM and a WORLD MENACE.

Such an organization as Rotary might be expected to avoid involvement in the purely political aspects of international relations, and might very properly do so.

But it is a credit to Rotary, as the speeches and statements at the San Francisco convention disclosed, that there was no avoidance of the fact that Communism is NOT a political issue for individual nations or for the civilized world at large, but is an EVIL CONSPIRACY AGAINST ALL CONCEPTS OF HUMAN FREEDOM AND JUSTICE.

One of the best expressions of the underlying Rotary purpose in this respect was that of Chairman Allen G. Miller of the Advertising Men's Conference, which was one of the 36 vocational assemblies held in conjunction with the convention.

Declaring that there was complete agreement among the Rotarians of the world that the American way of life, as opposed to Communism, embraces the best hopes and aspirations of all humanity, Mr. Miller said:

"It will be in the hope that companies all over the country will use thoughts in their ads designed to SELL THE PEOPLE ON THE AMERICAN WAY OF LIFE AS OPPOSED TO COMMUNISM."

I love you. Words are small;
'Tis life speaks plain:
In twenty years
Perhaps you may know all.
—DINAH CRAIK.

DO YOU WANT to live to be 100? Then don't lose your temper. Don't fly into a rage at your loving wife or your hard-working secretary. Don't even get angry when your horse wins but is disqualified.

Violent rages shorten life. That's what Louis Cornaro stated in his book "How to Live a Hundred Years." Louis must have known something. He wrote the book when in his thirties and lived to be over 100. And that was in the fifteenth century when the life expectancy was around 35. Cornaro also advised that a man find out what foods agreed with him. That is, not to follow prescribed diets but originate one that suits you. Louis once wrote in his diary: "I am 95 today. I find myself as fresh and healthy as if 25." Think of being as good at 95 as at 25. Now if Hans Wagner had only followed Cornaro's system of living he could still be playing shortstop for the Pirates.

ASKING. Queries from clients. Q—Our cat has already had 58 kittens. How long can this go on? How many kittens can a cat give birth to? A—If a cat starts to have blessed events early in life she can produce as many as 135 kittens. Q—Who was the thoroughbred Proctor Knott named after and in what year did this horse win the Kentucky Derby. A—The animal you mention was named after a Kentucky Congressman. It never won the Kentucky Derby.

HORSES & WOMEN. According to the most recent statistics, the average woman gets three proposals of marriage between the ages of 19 and 23. Ask your daughter how she is doing. If she will talk, ask her how the young gentlemen worded the proposal. It is claimed by cynical viewers of the situation that about one man in a thousand proposes in what the females consider "a romantic way." How about you, mister? What did you say in popping the large question? Or did the girl propose to you? It might be interesting to learn how romantically women word their proposals of marriage. Have no figures as to the percentage of women now doing the proposing. A young fellow told me that in San Diego, Cal., nine girls proposed marriage to him in a six-day period. But that was during the war when he was wearing the uniform of the U. S. Marines.

PASSING BY: Bert Dunne, Advertising man and baseball expert. Said to be the best "how to hit" teacher in the country. Playing for Notre Dame he had a one-season batting average of .516! Passed up a professional ball-playing career because he had a weak arm. Some team should have hired Bert as a pinch hitter. . . . Ed "Strangler" Lewis. Still wrestling professionally. Don't know how old he is, but will bet one stogie he is over 50. I haven't seen a wrestling match in years. But, if Ed ever tangles with "Two-Ton" Tony Galento I am going to be there. I want to see what happens after Tony looks at Ed and says: "I'll moulder the bum."

SIDELIGHTS: The Muehlbach Hotel in Kansas City serves the best ham and eggs in the land. That is my opinion and I have consumed that delightful dish all over the country from the Golden Gate of California to the rock-bound coast of Maine. . . . If the article isn't at least 117 years old it cannot be rightly classed as an "antique." Impress that on your wife before she goes antique shopping, which is becoming an increasingly favorite indoor sport of the female of the species.

HELPUFUL WORDS: Some quotations, which the allegedly sophisticated refer to as "corny," have helped me over some tough spots. Here is one that kept me going in some dark hours. Is by Harriet Beecher Stowe: "When you get into a tight place and everything goes against you, till it seems as if you could not hold on a minute longer, never give up then for that's just the place and time the tide will turn."

ASIDES: The slogan of Duluth, Minn., is "The Hay Fever Haven of America." I have always been interested in Duluth but have never been there. Another city I want to see soon is Dubuque, Iowa. . . . Kentucky produces 40 per cent of the whiskey made in the U. S. A. Yet 88 of the 120 counties of the Blue Grass State are dry by local option. Research indicates that firemen make the best husbands.

SHOCKS: The power in an ordinary small electric light globe connection is sufficiently strong to kill a person in case of faulty insulation. What I can't understand is why they put brass pull chains on light sockets. I know a fellow who pulled one of those chains when his hands were wet. He wasn't killed but he was knocked to the floor by the shock that resulted.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Copyright, 1947, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

NEW YORK, June 13—I hope I don't seem to be rubbing it in on this poor Louis Horch, the regional director of the Department of Commerce, who got the job by appointment of Henry Wallace shortly before Harry Truman threw Henry out.

Horch got mixed up with Wallace and Prof. Nicholas Konstantin Roerich back in the twenties. Horch had made a lot of money in foreign exchange and like some others of the same general experience in life, decided to invest in a load of culture.

That was how he came to pick up with Roerich, who seems to have sized up the American parvenu according to the old Continental formula, and certainly wasn't wrong.

Roerich put on airs. He ran his fingers through his scraggly, two-legged, Oriental beard, and, on the reminiscence of some embittered back-sliders of the cult, he was so elusive, exclusive and superior that he had some of them thinking he was at least super-normal and one of those Tibetan wise-guys.

A MAN who has been working on theosophy was in a little while ago with a big book on the hard-shell or Blavatsky school of theosophy and he said they say the deity lives in the Himalayas and is some kind of Chinaman. They say they know his name and R. F. D.

"Do you think it could have been a mistake on our part to brush off Father Divine?" I asked him. "You know his people said he was a deity!"

"That is ridiculous," he said. "Don't be afraid. This party is Chinese."

Well, as I say, poor Horch put in with a lot of money and he says old Roerich started out impossible and became more and more so all the time. He had to be the head man. He didn't visit or talk business. You entered the presence. And Horch got sick and tired of the sameness of the old boy's paintings of mountains and Himalayan joints and haystacks on fire.

The first time I interviewed Horch he said he started to get back some of the money he had put into the big lamazeum on Riverside Drive where the faithful, a close little group, were going to have free rent come hell or high water, and nobody's paintings but the old man's were to be shown in the gallery.

This was the plant where Henry Wallace is said to have visited some times, back in those days when the Guru letters in a handwriting an awful lot like his were being written and in language that you would want to disown even if you were a sophomore in the sweet anguish of your first crush.

"WE FIRED the guy soon enough," Mr. Horch said. "He wanted to be flattered all the time. We fired him out in 1935, absolutely. Success went completely to his head."

Yes, but what about the business, I wished to know. Did Mr. Horch ever subscribe to the monkey-business about the flaming chalice and the purifying fires, the heart trust and so forth?

This was the kind of prattle that made the Guru letters such amusing yet terrifying reading when one considered that the suspected writer of this gush might have been a man who might have stepped into the presidency in time of war.

Suppose it was Wallace and consider those goofy expressions and the statements that he has been making in his recent speeches abroad and here.

He was Vice-President until 1945, three years after we actually went into the war. He could have called in some mystic or Himalayan fakir to tell him what to do.

Horch laughed. Nope, he never went for the philosophical or spiritual nonsense. He was a practical business man. Foreign exchange. Foreign credit. Money. Very common-sense fellow.

THEN I plodded on, down to the lawyers' offices, after that record of the court trial in which Horch got back control of the apartment house.

And then I called Horch back and started reading him out of the record some of his own letters, and honestly he cringed so hard you could hear him.

The strange quirk of it all is that poor Horch's letters are in the law books for anyone to read or republish, while the Guru letters are still more or less withheld from public view, and Henry hasn't been forced to acknowledge them or forced to deny them and set people to pinning them on him.

I was going over some of Henry's writings today. As a symbol in the front of the one called "New Frontiers" there is a device designed by Roerich himself as the insignia of the cultural Red Cross of the world. Roerich was right proud of that little sign.

It consists of a red circle and within the circle three red spheres. The circle, of course, is probably the oldest and simplest sign in all symbolism and the three red spheres have long been honored in the common-place culture of the Western world as the insignia of the place where a man can hock a watch from Monday to pay day.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN, WED., JUNE 18, 1947

HOLLYWOOD, June 18—Harry Cushing III, whose mother was Kathleen Vanderbilt, is going into the picture business. He tells me he expects to make a movie called "Rapture" in Italy and has already talked to George Sanders about playing the lead. George has an appointment in London to star in "Then and Now" in the role of Machiavelli, the Somerset Maugham story, so he is listening to the young scion of the Vanderbilt family.

Probably George would like to go away and stay as long as he can, since Zsa-Zsa Hulton says she's going to get him back, and from what I hear, George isn't eager about returning.

Young Cushing came out here with Bernard Strauss, who is putting on "Love and Oh, My," a stage play. Another good reason Cushing came here is that he followed Georgette Windsor, the gal he loves, after a quarrel.

"TABLE IN THE WILDERNESS," a Biblical story by Norton S. Parker, is now being read by J. Arthur Rank at De Morte with Mrs. Rank urging that he buy it.

The way J. Arthur Rank feels about religious books it seems very likely he will grab it. The story is about Joseph of Egypt, and the book is now in its third edition.

I hear two other companies were bidding for it. If Rank decides to make it, it would vie with "The Robe" in cost.

There's still talk that Rank will make "The Robe," too.

I WANT to reiterate that I don't believe "Maedchen in Uniform" should be shown in this country now. I say that despite the fact that I wrote a complimentary review when it opened years before the war. But conditions are different now. Many of our boys have died fighting the same group who made that movie.

I knew Dorothy Wleck pretty well when she was in Hollywood making pictures for Paramount, and she never made any secret of the fact that she was eager to get home to her husband who was one of Hitler's head men. She told me her heart was in Germany.

If we have to do any re-issuing, why don't we reissue some of our own fine pictures? There are plenty of them I'd like to see again. What about "Mrs. Miniver," "Wake Island," "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo" and "The House On 92nd Street?"

I am terribly interested to hear that Al Lewin has been signed by Louis B. Mayer as a producer, as a story adviser, and in much the same capacity he held when Irving Thalberg was alive. Bernie Fineman, Irving Thalberg and Al all worked together. Now Irving and Bernie are gone, but Al continues as a great director. He made "Portrait of Dorian Gray" for MGM and then went on his own, but I think he belongs at Metro and I am glad he is back there.

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: I've just learned that Kurt Kruger, who has been a heartbeater for so many eligible young ladies, goes East next month ostensibly to do personals and appear in summer stock. While he'll do these things he will also marry Nina Vale, the radio writer. She's the girl who played the lead opposite Dick Powell in "Cornered."

After our broadcast Sunday, Betty Hutton, Ted Briskin and I went on to dinner and passing through the autograph lines at one of the popular sales, Ted was reminded of a funny story that happened to him and his blonde bride.

Last week they had dined at the Brown Derby in Hollywood, and when they came out one of the little boys, came up to Ted and asked, "Are you a movie star?"

"Nope," said Ted, and kid- dingly he added, "but I'm studying and maybe I will be in a couple of years."

The kid looked him over solemnly. "Well," he said, snapping shut his autograph book, "I don't think I'll take a chance on you!"

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD collected at random: Jose Turbi will put up a bitter legal fight to get his grandchildren as soon as he returns from Europe. The children's father, Stephen Hero, kidnapped them from the Turbi home in Hollywood and took them to Long Island. I say "kidnaped" because Turbi's daughter, who died last year, gave her famous father the custody of the children.

Anna Neagle and Henry Wilcoxon get in town tomorrow. Their latest picture "Piccadilly Incident," has been bought by MGM for release in this country. I hear tell it's very good.

Constance Bennett's husband, John Thorton Coulter, has been transferred to California, which makes Connie very happy. I hear she is one of the largest stockholders in a new studio which is being planned.

Nancy Oakes de Marigny has arrived in New York and is the house guest of Carmen Figueroa. Carmen has taken a house and plans to remain in the big town for some time.

I keep hearing that Danny Kaye has a deal with Warner Brothers, which is to be announced later.

The romance of Pat Smart and Spencer Martin is reported from the big town as being hot, hot, hot.

Edmund O'Brien and Olga San Juan a new dinner-dance combination at Mocambo.

Lots of big parties, including Virginia Bruce's and Joe Pasternak's, for the opening of Jack's-at-the-Beach. I used to eat his good food years ago when he was in business here.

Jimmy Stewart is hopping mad. Somebody has been sending him two live rabbits every day. Today the quota was increased to four. He's rapidly going crazy. This happened immediately after he agreed to play "Harvey" the man who chums with an imaginary rabbit.

That's all today.

NEW YORK MAYORS are generally publicists first and administrators when they have time out between dinners, entertaining visiting foreigners, making profound statements on trivial subjects, and personal appearances in unnecessary places.

The late Jimmy Walker was a grand master of mayoral by-products. He did everything there, it seemed, at the same time and everywhere delivered an address which was packed with humor. Jimmy Walker was extraordinarily popular and could undoubtedly have been re-elected because the people loved him. When he returned to the United States from exile, Dave Dubinsky gave him a job.

Fiorillo La Guardia, familiarly known as "The Little Flower" or "Butch," made more noise than all the mayors New York has had in this century. He was not only a noisy mayor but an obstreperous one. He not only quarreled with everybody but he made the quarrels amusing for the populace.

He was colorful and knew how to make the public believe that he was immaculately honest even though he occasionally stretched a point for practical reasons, as, for instance, turning Harlem into a vote-producing Negro ghetto. This may have been an honest operation, but it produced frightful results in the city.

WELL, "Butch" went his way writing advertising copy for a furniture store and doing some minor journalistic and radio work. His principal activity now seems to be to instruct his successor, Bill O'Dwyer, in the finer art of city government. As neither possesses trained skill in this field, the comments of La Guardia on O'Dwyer and vice versa keep those interested amused no end.

Bill O'Dwyer migrated to this country from Ireland in early manhood, which may not be the Municipal Art Commission got into a quarrel about George Washington's desk. It appears that O'Dwyer is short of office space in the City Hall, which is an architectural gem. Certain of its rooms are preserved in their original, pristine state as memorials of a great tradition. So Bill throws the tradition out and puts in some modern desks and filing cabinets. One has to be born in a tradition for it to have root of any depth.

However, he is a delightful person who knows how to make friends and move from nothing to something, which is better than the other way around. He started public life as a policeman and he is now a CIO leader and a candidate for governor of the state of New York. If the Constitution did not forbid such frivolity, he would compete with Henry Wallace.

O'DWYER has taken the extraordinary position that in spite of the fact that he is mayor of the largest city in the United States, he is also a ballyhoo artist for the CIO in opposition to the Taft-Hartley bill. In New York that is good politics because the labor barons are opposed to the bill, and many of them make New York their headquarters and spend their money here.

O'Dwyer apparently feels now that if Tom Dewey runs for President, the Republicans will be in a bad way for a successor. Also, if Tom Dewey should be nominated, he might not run for governor again.

His strategy is that whereas the Democrats will vote for a Democrat come what may, the Laborites and Communists will only vote for a Democrat if his labor record satisfies the labor bosses.

Therefore, Bill O'Dwyer aims to please them. He arranged a municipal veto day and airplane sky-writers muddled the heavens with political slogans—an innovation in this city.

He issued grand pronouncements at Madison Square Garden and generally made himself abhorrent to the decent and respectable elements in the city who forget to vote, anyhow.

Bill O'Dwyer is not as amusing as either Jimmy Walker or "Butch" La Guardia. He lacks their personalities, their glamor. He lacks Jimmy's tone. But he is whacking up a good show for the citizenry who find it cheaper, after taxes, to watch their mayor strut than to pay to hear Al Jolson sing.

It is the free show that makes votes.

Broadway

By Dorothy Kilgallen

NEW YORK, June 18—As a customer who always adored getting away from it all via cinematic diversion, I should like to mention that in recent months motion pictures have become the very antithesis of the escapism entertainment.

Such reality, although in a couple of cases excellent, clinical studies as "Possessed"

Joan Crawford ("I'm sensational, but you want to kill yourself," was one pitiful non-professional's review) and "Smash-Up" and "The Other Love" and "Dishonored Lady" are filling the screens of the land with neuroses and psychoses of a frightening nature, but the most gruesome aspect of this trend is the fact that these films seem to be an irresistible magnet for persons beset with the problems of their respective heroines.

The "Smash-Up" opened at the Capitol the whole theater was suddenly thrown into a hysterical frenzy by a drunken doll who suddenly imagined that the people around her were tearing her coat into little pieces. The only difference between her and Susan Hayward in the least sober sequences of the picture was a matter of language, and the alcohol gave her such superhuman strength that she shook off the restraining hands of three ushers, a manager and an assistant manager until policemen arrived.

A friend of mine who admires Joan Crawford decided to see "Possessed." The weather had wrecked business, and the theater was practically empty. My friend, an I-want-to-be-a-type, chose a completely empty row and settled herself to Cry With Crawford. . . . A wild-eyed female decided to sit in the seat next to hers. And while poor Joan was bowing her head and apportioning the most dramatic kind of insanity, my friend's neighbor was doing likewise, by talking to herself, but when Joan let Van Heflin have it with her gun, the lady cheered loud and happily, an unconventional reaction that sent her reeling up the aisle and out into the lobby.

WASHINGTON, June 18—An indignant taxpayer recently wrote to Internal Revenue Commr. Joseph D. Nathan, Jr.: "I am going to buy a skunk farm so you will keep your nose out of my business!"

This taxpayer, if he went through with the threat, delayed too long because there is no longer any danger of olfactory intrusion by Mr. Nathan. He is quitting the line of the monkey.

The taxpayer, if he wishes, can re-aim his polecat polemics at George J. Schoeneman who has been named to succeed Mr. Nathan, but it will be wasted effort. Mr. Schoeneman, who has been White House assistant to both Roosevelt and Truman, has acquired unlimited practice in holding his nose.

Mr. Nathan will jump immediately to the other side of the fence. With J. Phil Wenchel, chief counsel to the Bureau of Internal Revenue for the past 12 years, he will set up law offices here and in New York to advise clients how to pay as few taxes as possible.

That is the way it is in Washington. A bureaucrat achieves fame as a great trust bustler. Then he resigns and goes into the business of showing trusts how to avoid being busted.

THIS PIECE, however, is not intended to be political. It is reminiscent.

In the first place let me say that I have never been particularly choosy in the kind of company I keep—such characters as named Battler, Bergman and Smith provide blatant testimony—but I never thought I should become pally with a tax-collector.

However, it is well-nigh impossible not to like Joe Nathan. Sometimes in his company I even forget he is responsible for my going around in second-hand sack suits and shoes.

So I decided that, inasmuch as he was getting out, I would ask him to tell me some of his most poignant experiences as gouger-in-chief of the nation. The first question I asked was why he decided to retire.

"Well," he said, absolutely deadpan, "I got tired of working for a salary. I suggested to the president that he put me on a commission basis. We collect more than $10,000,000,000 a year and even a small percentage would have been ducky. But," he added, "the president couldn't see it."

Mr. Nathan said that when he took the job in April, 1944, he didn't expect to be chief tax collector long.

"I had to make a tour of field offices with George Schoeneman, who was then with the bureau," he recounted, "and we hit into a terrible storm flying into Milwaukee. The ship was curving madly and seemed to be about to be rent asunder any moment."

"Just then the pilot came into the cabin and got talking to a woman passenger he obviously knew very well. The captain told the passenger he would rescue her on his next trip."

"George Schoeneman turned to me and said: 'I hope that's one promise he keeps!'"

BEING TAX COLLECTOR has demonstrated to Mr. Nathan that human beings do funny things. For instance, there's a man in Chicago who hates income taxes so thoroughly he does not wish to be associated with them in any manner. So he always sends in his taxes anonymously.

By George Dixon

Another taxpayer has been trying for years to claim depreciation on his wife. He states in his return that she is "so worn out she can't even get my breakfast."

Mr. Nathan said he has striven to simplify income tax forms but they apparently still baffle a man in Tennessee who lists as dependents: 1 cow, 2 horses, 25 chickens, 10 pigs and one sick wife.

There's a small businessman in Denver who got even by submitting his records in Chinese characters.

A taxpayer in Hawaii has never forgiven the commissioner for refusing him a "bad debt" deduction for passage money he sent a fiancée to come to the islands and marry him. She married another fellow and refused to return the dough.

MR. NUNAN is a life member of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, but he's had endless trouble with the Irish.

"They could never be convinced," he said, "that the choice of March 15 for income tax day wasn't an English plot to put a damper on the celebration of St. Patrick's Day."

Mr. Nathan has discovered there's nothing so dead in Washington as a retired big shot. The other night he invited 12 people for dinner and not one showed up. His wife, Kathryn, finally looked at him and said:

"Now I KNOW you're out!"

How to get the MOST out of that Home you Buy!

Nearly every American family naturally wants to own its own home. But buying a home, under today's unusual conditions, calls for careful consideration. Before investing in a home, the best authorities suggest you get answers to these questions

Q. Is a home a good investment?

A. A home is a good investment in happiness and peace of mind, if you don't spend more on it than you can afford, and the cost to carry it will not be a heavy burden. It gives you greater comfort, security and satisfaction.

But don't think of it as a money-making investment. In the long run, few homes are re-sold at a profit.

Q. What price can I afford to pay?

A. That depends on how much money you make, and how much you have saved. A helpful guide that many follow is, don't pay more than one-and-a-half to two-and-a-half times the amount of your net annual income (that is, the income you have left after allowing for income tax).

You should put up as large a part of the purchase price as you can. The more cash you put up, the sooner you'll own your home free and clear.

Q. How can I tell if the price is fair?

A. Unless you are very experienced in real estate matters, you had better get some advice from a competent and impartial source. Some neighborhoods are "going up" and some are "going down." Some communities have lower real estate tax rates than others. You should get all the facts before you buy.

Q. What will it cost to carry the house?

A. While you are paying off the mortgage you will have certain other charges to pay: Budget monthly for such items as interest, taxes, insurance, repairs and upkeep. Try to keep these costs, plus what you pay to reduce your mortgage, down to about one-fourth of your monthly income.

You should pay off your mortgage just as fast as you reasonably can, and have a little reserve so that if hard times come, as they have a way of doing, you'll be in a better position to weather the storm.

Q. Suppose I die before the mortgage is paid off?

A. If you are not sure your widow's income will enable her to continue the monthly payments, you can arrange a portion of your life insurance so that it will pay off the balance of the mortgage, if need be. Mortgage payments and other carrying charges which come up every month should be handled the same way as your taxes and life insurance.

HOW TO PLAN FOR FAMILY HAPPINESS

Planning to get the most out of your new home is only part of sound money planning. You'll be more likely to have enough money on hand when you need it, if you'll follow these few simple rules: For Today : : The hardest thing, for most families, is to take care of the larger fixed items such as rent, taxes, insurance, mortgage and installment payments.

So first add up all your fixed items for the year, divide by 52, and set aside that amount weekly.

Also every family should have a "rainy day" fund equal to at least four weeks' income. Set aside a little every week until you have that much.

When you have done that, you'll know how much you can safely spend for food, clothing, heat, light, household furnishings, amusements, and so forth.

For Tomorrow : : We live in a changing world. Family needs and circumstances change... living costs... taxes. If you have not had your life insurance program gone over lately, the chances are 2 to 1 that it should be brought up to date.

There are so many ways in which you can use your life insurance, that you should have the life insurance you now own checked to see if it is suited to your needs. This is a service that comes with your life insurance.

The person best equipped to help you with this is the well-trained life insurance agent. Get in touch with your agent, or write your life insurance company.

'Carnegie Hall' Impressive

The widely-heralded "Carnegie Hall" opened at the Esquire last night, and turned out to be all that its drum-beaters had promised, which in itself is a startling phenomenon.

That is to say the music, sung and played by the world's greatest artists, is every bit as impressive as it sounded in the advance ballyhoo. Remembering too many musical films in which the star on the lot was listed in the cast, with everyone doing some silly little role to justify the billing, we were skeptical about how much we would see and hear of each of the stars in "Carnegie Hall."

Be warned in advance, however, to ignore the story which provides the framework for the performances of the artists. Marsha Hunt and William Prince try hard to give it life, but it remains a dull, and at times embarrassing, device for bringing the musicians to the stage.

Don't let this warning keep you away from "Carnegie Hall," because the music more than compensates for the weaknesses of the script. Certainly you never before have had a chance to hear so many great artists for so little money. To attend a single concert by Lily Pons or Jascha Heifetz, an opera with Rise Stevens and Ezio Pinza, or a symphony concert conducted by Stokowski, would cost you more, and you would never get as close to the performers as the screen can bring you.

The film opens with Walter Damrosch conducting the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra in the last movement of Tchaikovsky's "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra." Then we have Bruno Walter conducting the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger."

Lily Pons is magnificent... and incidentally the recording in the film is the best we have ever encountered... in her rendition of "Vocalise" by Rachmaninoff and the Bell Song from "Lakme." Artur Schnabel's playing of Chopin's "Polonaise in A-Flat" and "Pavane in D-Flat" is thrilling.

And so it goes. Rise Stevens, Gregor Piatigorsky, Jan Peerce, Rodzinski, Stokowski, all contribute generously to the film. It even has, for the moderns, a trumpet solo by Harry James and Vaughn Monroe and his orchestra. There are musical incongruities here and there which will be noted by the experts, and a few moments that will give them a chuckle; on the other hand, this picture will do much to make new devotees of good music among the moviegoers.

'Cheyenne' Due At Met Thursday

Warners' super-western, "Cheyenne," will bring Dennis Morgan, Jane Wyman, Bruce Bennett and Janis Paige to the Metropolitan screen on Thursday for its local premiere.

Based on Paul Wellman's novel of the roaring, lawless, old Wyoming frontier, "Cheyenne" recreates the hectic deeds and gun-blazing action of the desperadoes who preyed upon the settlers and visitors to the "Devil's Pocket" territory of Cheyenne and Laramie.

Most notorious of these bad-lads bandits was "The Poet," so-called because of his habit of leaving a memento in doggerel when he robbed the Wells-Fargo express line.

'The Farmer's Daughter' Showing at the Modern

"The Farmer's Daughter," the delightful screen hit starring Loretta Young, Joseph Cotten and Ethel Barrymore, is now showing on the Modern screen.

Smart Set Coming Out Party

By BETTY ALDEN

FIRST COMING OUT party in the lovely old Sears mansion at 86 Beacon st., since Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge (Emily Sears) was a debutante, takes place this afternoon. The house daughter, Virginia, and later this evening the debutante set will attend a dance at Longwood Cricket Club in honor of Harriet Walker and Marilee Wallace. Harriet is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Walker of Brookline. Marilee is the stepdaughter of Mr. Roger P. Curry of Chestnut Hill. Their ushers' dinner is at the Algonquin Club.

FOLLOWING A WHIRL of prewedding festivities Patricia Eames, post-debutante daughter of Mrs. James J. Curry of Boston, becomes the bride of Edward F. Mahony, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Mahoney of Beacon st., at 4:30 this afternoon. The ceremony, performed by Mons. Francis L. Phelan at St. Cecilia's Sacristy, is followed by a reception at the Women's Republican Club.

Given in marriage by Mr. Curry, the pretty brunette bride is wearing a gown of white faille with a net yoke bordered with seed pearl embroidery. Her gown has a full length train, long tight sleeves and a finger-ring belt caught to a headband of seed pearls. She is carrying stephanotis and lilies and wearing a pearl necklace which was a birthday gift from her bridegroom.

Mary Frances Falvey is maid of honor and the bridesmaids are Anne Gries of Hamilton, Susan Bradford of Boston, Nic. Robb of Beverly and Susan Rachlin, New York. They are wearing ice blue faille with cap sleeves, full skirts, headbands and bouquets of narcissi tinted lavender and pink.

Mrs. Curry, mother of the bride, is receiving in the pink, blue and black printed silk suit with a large black lace hat and white orchid corsage. Mrs. Mahony, who entertained the bridal party at a buffet supper last evening, is wearing gray lace with a matching hat and lavender orchids.

The best man is Gael Mahony and the ushers Dr. Thomas H. Mahony, Jr., Robert Laacson, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Frederick B. Myers and James Gilman. The bride is the daughter of the late Seth W. R. Eames of Boston and a debutante of 1941-42. The bridegroom has resumed his studies at Harvard after four and a half years with the mounted troops of the 83d Infantry Division. They will live in Boston.

Sun-Tan Lotion Helpful to All

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE, Beauty and Fashion Editor

*"The glorious sun
Stays in his course and plays the alchemist
Turning with splendor of his precious eye
The meagre cloddy earth to glittering gold . . ."*

THE GREAT SHAKESPEARE penned those immortal lines . . . and the modern cosmetic scientists have taken him literally in "turning" a pale-faced damsel into a "glittering" goddess of sun-kissed bronze.

The virtues of sun-bathing have been known and practiced for thousands of years . . . since the time of Hippocrates . . . and the golden look has now become the standard summer look. Fashion designers have gone a long way with us this year in designing feminine yet functional sun-clothes.

They've given us paradoxical little fancies that permit us to be bare-as-bare-can-be . . . or quickly covered . . . with all manner of capelets, jackets and hooded shirts that may be donned in a jiffy . . . to aid us in timing our exposure to the sun. Still even fashion authorities admit that this golden look is more dependent on tanned skin than on clothes. Therefore, a sun sports lotion becomes an integral part of our summer wardrobe. And woe unto the fair maiden who ventures forth without such conducive pampering for the sun's blessing.

PROVEN UNDER SEVERE ARMY TESTS

There is a new sun-tanning lotion on the market which is made from ingredients which were proven under severe Army tests as being a most effective sunburn preventive. Ask any man who served in the blazing sun spots . . . he knows, and he'll tell you how the Army took care of the situation.

This new cosmetic lotion forms a flexible, invisible, continuous sun-screen on the skin . . . it is highly resistant to water and perspiration . . . and is a bland, soothing lotion that will not cause irritation.

Blondes and red-heads must be especially careful in the sun. The basic differences in the color of the skin are due to the presence of a pigment known as "melanin" . . . the principal function of which seems to be to protect the skin against injury from exposure to light. Because blondes and red-heads have less of this pigment than the sultry brunette . . . which is why brunettes gradually develop more of an immunity to sunburn . . . they must be doubly certain they are sufficiently protected.

However, the brunette who has passed the early stages of achieving her tan . . . or even the olive-skinned gal who claims she does not tan . . . is still exposed to the drying effects of the sun, which can be mighty harsh. It is requisite that some safeguarding lotion should be used . . . and it might as well as this one.

The great joy of this new sun sports lotion is that it need only be applied every three or four hours . . . and is not sticky or greasy . . . so love that lotion! It will aid you in attaining a beautiful tan without burning . . . to complement your pretty, be-ruffled sun clothes . . . or your colorful truly tailored ones. At any rate . . . it will pretty . . . pretty you!

For the name of this sun-tan lotion with an Army-tested ingredient, phone the Beauty Dept., Liberty 4000, daily except Sunday, or write to me, care of the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

SUMMER'S golden look is the coveted look . . . but blondes and redheads must take care lest the sun prefers their tender skin too much and turns them into the red-lobster look instead. For all who crave the toasted-on-both-sides golden look . . . blondes and brunettes . . . there is a new sun-tan lotion containing Army-tested ingredients which saved the boys from costly blazing exposure . . . and which should be integral part of the summer wardrobe.

Sour Milk, Cream—Useful

By MARTHA LEE, Household Editor

MILK AND MILK PRODUCTS top the list of foods recommended for everyone in the family every day. Smart homemakers, in the interest of economy and variety, like to get part of the amount needed in forms of milk other than the whole, sweet, liquid variety—in sour milk, sour cream, and cottage cheese, for instance.

DUTCH CREAM COOKIES

$\frac{1}{2}$ cup butter or margarine
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sugar 1 egg
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sour cream $\frac{1}{2}$ tsp. soda
3 cups flour (about)
1 tsp. lemon extract
Cream butter and sugar. Add egg and beat thoroughly. Dissolve soda in cream and add. Add flour to make a dough stiff enough to pat into a long roll. Wrap in wax paper. Chill overnight in refrigerator or cool place. When firm, slice thin. Bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) 10 minutes. Make 3 dozen medium-sized cookies.

SOUR MILK BISCUITS

2 cups flour 2-3 tsp. salt
 $\frac{1}{2}$ tsp. shortening $\frac{1}{2}$ tsp. soda
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sour milk (about)
Sift flour and measure. Sift dry ingredients together. Cut or rub shortening into flour mixture. Add milk to make a soft dough. Knead lightly; roll out $\frac{1}{2}$ inch thick. Cut and bake in a hot oven (450 deg. F.) 10 minutes.

Sour cream is more of a luxury than sour milk, and even a few spoonfuls are useful. It takes only a little to whip into horseradish sauce for meat or fish. Nor does it take much to make a spoonful or two of whipped sour cream to add to a bowl of soup or to give flavor to a sauce or gravy.

Some milk dealers sell delicious sour cream, at just the right stage of sourness, to serve as salad dressing—just the thick, sour cream by itself. Try this on a salad of chopped raw vegetables—cabbage, cucumbers, radishes, and young onions. And try it with cottage cheese, pouring it over the cheese to make it richer, smoother, and more tasty.

Sour cream gravy is another luxury, especially with fried chicken. But, lacking sour cream enough to make the gravy, add even a little to milk gravy, or add it to the white sauce with creamed chipped beef.

With vegetables—snap beans and spinach especially—a sour cream sauce is good. Make the sauce with the cooking liquid from the vegetables, and after it is thickened and seasoned, add the cream, then add the cooked vegetable, and heat slowly in the sauce for a few minutes. To season this sauce, use chopped onion and chopped parsley browned in butter, and if you like the "sweet-sour" flavor use a tablespoon each of vinegar and sugar.

Signing Birthday Card To Son's Fiancee

Dear Mrs. Beckman:

How should I sign my name on a birthday card I want to send to my son's fiancée, whom I have met only once? A. B.

Your correct signature to this birthday card would be the form of name you would correctly sign to any other note or letter; for a happy birthday, and every or Anne Brown, or Anne S.

Brown. You should NOT sign your formal name (for example Mrs. John Brown). Instead of signing your own name you might prefer to add written message to the printed or engraved message on the card, by writing, "Tom's mother is sending you loving greetings for a happy birthday, at good wish."

The Correct Thing

USE OF FIRST NAMES—Those who have worked together for any length of time may address each other by first names. A newcomer in the office should not assume this familiarity, however. (If you call her "Miss Jones" when addressing her, don't refer to her as "Vera" when speaking to others.)

Nicely Jeweled Gown

By EILEEN CALLAGHAN

IT'S NICE to have gilt-edged securities in your safe deposit box but it's more fashionable to own a diamond-edged dress. Fashion being a capricious female she is, the diamonds may be only fabric cutouts and still rate as newsworthy style notes.

It's refreshing in a season of elaborately jeweled gowns to come upon a short, formal frock that reaches tops in elegance with no help other than clever use of its own material. A cut-out design, used in two or three variations on a dress, can sparkle as brilliantly as a gemmed tiara.

The Carrie Munn cocktail dress sketched today is cut with as much finesse as a Victorian evening gown. Made of black silk, the dress features a molded waistline cut high to the bosom and low to the hips. Its bosom and hip lines are accentuated with diamond-shaped lines; the hemline is edged with fluttering diamond cutouts.

Wonder Bread Sandwiches Are Better Because Wonder Bread Is Slo-Baked To Stay Fresh Longer

Best part of any picnic are the "eats." And that means sandwiches!

To make sure the sandwiches are soft and fresh when it comes time to eat—make them with Wonder Bread.

Because Wonder Bread is slo-baked—baked 13% longer than many ordinary kinds—to stay fresh longer. And folks love the flavor and fresh softness of Wonder Bread with its fine-knit texture.

You bet—picnics can be fun when the "eats" are managed right. So get Wonder Bread from your grocer today. And have sandwiches that are better because they stay fresh longer.

Scribes' Faces Red As Barrett Plows On

By BILL GRIMES

CINCINNATI, June 17—Charlie "Red" Barrett, the guy the so-called critics said couldn't do it (I was one of them), has beaten the Dodgers, Cardinals, Cubs, Pirates and Reds in a row.

If I hadn't seen him compile that string of five straight wins, three of which were against the best clubs in the league, I doubt if I'd believe the records "Red" Barrett has compiled. He wouldn't put a jump on a six-month-old baby's head. What is even more confusing, every batter who faces him knows that any good "heel and toe" walker could start from the mound with the pitch and beat the ball to the catcher.

"RED" BARRETT good "heel and toe" walker could start from the mound with the pitch and beat the ball to the catcher.

Due to the fact that he cannot loosen up hitters with a "high hard one," Barrett must rely upon his assortment of curves and his ability to outguess the boys. And he's no dummy on or off the mound.

His probability Barrett is the most loquacious player in baseball. He seldom "comes up for air." During the course of a day, he gives his gums a terrific beating. He will kid or argue with anyone on any subject. He has gotten under the skin of more people than Carter has pills. He has been called everything in the book for japping off. But he still paps. It is no effort for him to carry on "rhubarbs" with three or four persons at one and the same time. But he can take a "rib" equally as well as he can give it out.

Because he volunteers to help out the "Dandy Little Sox" (Duffy Lewis), he has been nicknamed "Duffy Lewis, Jr." If the Braves have an assistant road secretary, he's Charles "Red" Barrett. He transmits Duffy's orders to the players and the press. He gives out the information regarding trains, baggage and busses. He handles the rooming lists. (They are made up, however, by his boss, Mr. Lewis.) He checks the Braves' party in at all hotels, which little gesture frequently causes Duffy to knock him down a peg or two. But he always bounces right back, and at the first opportunity takes over again.

It's a very strange thing but "Red" never "blows his top" at the names he's called by his teammates. And, brother, there are times when he should. But if he reads any article which criticizes his pitching, he pouts like a school-boy.

Harvard Seeks 9th Straight Over Yale in Crew Test

NEW LONDON, Ct., June 18 (AP)—Harvard and Yale meet tonight in a crew race up the Thames river for the 82nd time since 1852, but the diamond glitter of prewar years is missing.

There were fewer and smaller yachts and less spectators as the famous four-mile race, oldest competition of its kind in America, was renewed after a six-year lapse, with Harvard favored to carry on its winning streak.

That winning streak embraces eight straight varsity victories and goes back to 1936, but includes two shortened wartime regattas at Derby and Boston.

During the opening series at Braves Field, the Phillies knocked his ears off on successive days. So, naturally, the scribes unloaded on him. Before the Blue Jays were retired in the first inning of the first game, they teed off on "Red" for four hits and four runs. Then the following day, in 1-1-3 innings, they belted him for four more hits and seven of them scored. Just how to treat such situations without putting the blast on the pitcher, I wouldn't know. But for a couple of weeks ever time I encountered the "Redhead," he'd look down his nose and pass without speaking.

But everything is hunky-dory now. All the scribes are "Red's" pals. He'd be a "push-over" for a life story, in which he'd probably relate how he made a home run hitter out of his roommate Hank Camelli. He doubtless rendered a few selections at some "hot spot" last night. He loves spotlights in night clubs. But don't get me wrong, Barrett does not drink or smoke, and he's always in his hotel room before "Shorty" Young checks in the players.

But enough of the light side of Barrett. Let's get down to his pitching since he's been on this winning streak. In the second game on Memorial Day, "Red" pitched shutout ball and beat the Dodgers, 3 to 0, while allowing "Dem Bums" five hits.

While Barrett was pitching for Billy Southworth's 1945 Cardinals in Brooklyn one afternoon, Leo Durocher called him a name that really got him riled. He beat Brooklyn that day and now every time he comes in contact with the Dodgers he sees red.

Five days after knocking the Dodgers back on their heels, Barrett was responsible for Eddie Dyer having a bad afternoon at Braves Field. He pinned a 3 to 1 defeat on the world champions, whom he limited to six hits and shut out after the first frame.

"Red's" next appearance was against the Cubs and what a job he did on them, a one-hitter, dyer having a bad afternoon at Braves Field. He pinned a 3 to 1 defeat on the world champions, whom he limited to six hits and shut out after the first frame.

Barrett opened this road trip with a 6 to 2 win over the Pirates. It was another six-hitter. Then, yesterday, he ran his string of victories to five by virtue of a 11 to 1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds, who turned him back to the minors a few years ago.

"But," he added, "we have no illusions."

Yale men regarded this race as a good augur for today's big three races.

It was the first time any sort of Yale crew had defeated Harvard since 1937 and ended a 23-victory winning streak that embraced varsity, junior varsity, frosh, and combination races.

Braves Use Wright Under Lights

CINCINNATI, June 18—Manager Billy Southworth will have Big Ed Wright pitching when the Braves challenge the Reds under the lights tonight at Crosley Field. Due to illness, Wright has started only three games this season. His record is 1-1, a win and a loss against the Phillies while pitching but 30 2-3 frames. He can earn a regular starting berth by beating the Reds. Ewell Blackwell, who is rated as the best right-hander in the league, will oppose Wright. "Blackie" has turned in nine victories to date and will be aiming at his eighth straight win tonight. He has dropped only two games, one to the Braves, who reached him for 10 hits and 7 runs in 3 1-3 innings at home.

To date, the Braves have been terrific on this trip. While winning four in a row, they have scored 42 runs and made 59 hits. In the nightcap of Sunday's win bill in Pittsburgh and again yesterday, Billy Southworth's "shock troops"—Nanny Fernandez, Danny Litchfield and the two McCormicks—cooled off the opposition in nothing flat, and then the Braves went on to overwhelm the Bucs and the Reds. Regardless of what the Braves have done to him in two games, Ken Peterson, the Reds' 21-year-old southpaw, is a great prospect. The Tribe belted "Pete" hard in one inning at home and had him out of there yesterday before three men had been retired in the opening canto.

The Reds were a soft touch for "Red" Barrett yesterday. After the Braves gave him three runs to work on in the first round, Barrett simply flipped pitches at Johnny Neun's boys all afternoon. He was touched up for a dozen hits, but gave only one run, a circuit clout by Grady Hatton in the 6th. After having a heart to heart talk with Southworth before the game, Earl Torgerson snapped out of his slump, connecting with two hits, driving in three runs which "upped" his RBI to 44. Prior to his first hit yesterday, Torgery had gone "10 for 0."

Taylor Asbury, who plays third base for the University of Cincinnati, worked out with the Braves yesterday. He's big and rugged but moves around like a lightweight. He's a left-handed batter and seems to pack plenty of power.

Mrs. Billy Southworth and her daughter Carol came down from their home at Sunbury, O., for this series. "Red" Carman, the ex-Marine who managed the Braves' farm club at Leavenworth, Kan., last season, came over from Muncie, Ind., and was Southworth's guest at the game. "Red" has quit baseball and is a salesman for a Middletown, O., bag company.

On the way to her home in Tulsa, Okla., Mrs. Warren Spahn stopped off here, hoping to see her husband pitch. Among the old timers at Crosley Field were Larry Benton, the former Cincinnati and Giants' southpaw, and "Noodle" Hahn, another left-handed hurler who, although 70 years of age, was in uniform. Mrs. Ernie White and Joe Dan, her 8-year-old son, joined the Braves' coach in Bluefield, W. Va., Monday, and then decided to come up here. Joe Dan is small for his age but he's a pretty good little ball player. He has an exceptionally fine arm and takes a healthy cut at the ball, despite the fact that the bat is much too heavy for him.

Pete Hader, a veteran pitcher who spent most of his career in the Southern Association and who recently was replaced as manager of the Anniston, Ala., club, pitched batting practice for the Reds yesterday. Duffy Lewis advised the newspapermen to get their World Series tickets applications in early. Frank McCormick is extremely popular here. Incidentally, big Frank has done a very nice job at first base and at the bat on this trip for the Tribe.
